Hospital Sisters of St. Francis celebrate their humble beginning and storied impact

By BRIAN C. BLASCO
Special to Catholic Times

On July 2, 1844, Father Christopher Bernsmeyer, OFM, a Franciscan priest, witnessed the religious commitment of a small group of women in Our Lady of Grace Chapel, Telgte, Germany, a village near Muenster, Westphalia. These women became the first members of the Hospital Sisters of the Third Order Regular of St. Francis, an order founded by Father Christopher, whose motivation was to take care of the sick and poor in their homes in rural areas. Later, they continued the care of the sick in homes, hospitals, and on the battlefields.

When in 1875 the Kulturkampf raged with increasing violence in Prussia and the Hospital Sisters feared that they would be banished just like other religious communities, Bishop Peter Baltes of Alton, Illinois, wanted health care services in his diocese. He wrote to the Hospital Sisters in Muenster with the request that they offer Sisters for his diocese.

In response, Mother General Bernhardine explained that this request was granted because at that time, the acceptance of new members had become impossible because of the religious laws passed on May 31, 1875. Since the Congregation saw its existence threatened, the invitation from America was a blessing.

Sisters were invited to be missionaries in America and 20 of the 50 Sisters who volunteered, ages 24 to 43, were chosen. The Sisters sailed on the SS Maas on Oct. 16, 1875, and after a treacherous journey across the Atlantic Ocean, they arrived in Alton on Nov. 6, 1875. These first Sisters were organized into small groups and brought health care services to the people of Alton, Belleville, Effingham, East St. Louis, Litchfield, and Springfield. These cities were chosen because there were German immigrants and because the cities had access to the railroad. The Motherhouse would be in Springfield. When the Sisters arrived, they found that the German immigrants spoke English and so the Sisters learned English with grade school children. In the subsequent years, other communities in the United States of America requested the health care services of the Sisters.

Yearly since 1875, the Hospital Sisters of St. Francis from Germany volunteered to be missionaries in America, and small groups were sent. This ended in 1934 as the number of American women interested in joining the community increased. In 1960, there were 820 professed Hospital Sisters in America in 28 locations.

Originally, the Community of Sisters elected Sisters to serve on the leadership team who were responsible for directing their religious community in spiritual life and overseeing the direction and management of their ministries, including the hospitals. This team served on all the hospital boards in Illinois and Wisconsin. With the expansion of hospitals following the introduction of Medicare and Medicaid, it became

Sisters reflect on their history, impact

Sister Trudy O'Connor, OSF, and Sister Charitas Prince, OSF, at St. John's Hospital School of Nursing, Springfield.

"I realized that for me health ministry was not in taking away pain, suffering and death, but rather helping the person to reach the stage of acceptance. Dick, a 22-year-old man with terminal cancer, was a gift to me. In his inability to pray or understand the sufferings before him, my ministry was to accept my helplessness and therefore to completely rely on God whose grace could bring Dick back to Him. It is a fact of experience that suffering can lead us to God in humble prayer and can be an opportunity for growing in sensitivity to others. I walked away from Dick's death with tears in my eyes along with a satisfaction that I experienced the mystery of life and death. I rejoiced for Dick's passage from death to life in Psalm 45: 'Your God has chosen you.'"

— Sister Anna Marie Schwieder, OSF

"Things happen that you never dream of, but God gives you the grace at that moment to act in whatever manner is necessary. You are never acting alone."

— Sister Marciana Lynch, OSF

"This is how a person is converted: they understand God's blessing and know that there are other sufferings in life. Regardless of how confused I was, I knew there was hope."

— Sister Pacis Bao, OSF

"I do not think you have to be in health care very long before you realize we can do something, but that healing takes a divine help. You realize that we are powerless people. We have various gifts to use in different ways, but in the end, it has to be God with you. I think you have to get on your knees and say, 'I can only go this far, and the rest is up to You, God.'"

— Sister Frances Elizabeth Schmitz, OSF

"You could just feel the hand of God in the work. I sensed that."

— Sister Dolorine Czok, OSF

"I do remember one prayer that we always prayed together after breakfast, and it is such a good prayer. It goes like this, 'Oh my God, I do not know what will happen to me today. All that I know is that nothing will befall me but what You have foreseen and ordained for all eternity. Therefore, I am resigned to all.'"

— Sister Laverne Donahue, OSF

"We are all here together because we have heard this call. It is a mystery to me still why I am here. I did not know the Hospital Sisters before I came, but the Motherhouse grounds just drew me in."

— Sister Ann Mathieu, OSF

"I think the key, first of all, for a woman religious is to ask herself, 'Where are my priorities for my religious life?' Second, ask yourself, 'How do I incorporate them into your professional life?' I believe that you begin each day nourishing your religious life, and then you move into your professional role. But you do not forget the source of your strength and your energy."

— Sister M. Paulette Collings, OSF

Sister Peter Damian Chiang, OSF, at St. John's Hospital, Springfield.

"I think at the heart of why our hospitals are unique is the personal interest of the Sisters who built them. They established them and brought them from nothing into large, complex business organizations while retaining the spirit of a family-run business. Until recently, this was apparent when you came into one of our facilities and would encounter our Sisters who were distinguishable from everyone else, for the most part. They had a personal interest, and they knew that they were going to be there after many of the other personnel went home or moved on."

— Sister Jomary Trstensky, OSF

"Franciscan spirituality is simple. It is a call to be humble, to be poor; to hospitality; it is a call to be open to all and to accept all. We are all very different, every single one of us. But there is something that is the same in us, and that is the Franciscan heart. It binds us together. It is our spirit, and it is shared with all the people who work with us."

— Sister Mary Ann Minor, OSF

"We find joy and satisfaction in our work and in our life because we believe we are following God's invitation to serve in His name. There is great meaning in our motto, 'A life to be lived not a work to be done,' for it illustrates the deeper realization of the dignity of the human person. The joy we experience comes from within as we perform tasks that might otherwise be difficult. Our joy is seen in the faces and hearts of people who have been gifted with a renewed sense of self and the deeper awareness of Christ's healing presence."

— Sister Joan Winkler, OSF

"Throughout our history, we recognized needs in society that were not being met. Upon the invitation of a local bishop, we worked to make a positive impact in improving the quality of life of those for whom we cared. Many times, we arrived with little or no preparation other than our basic training and God-given instinct. When the need was met and the quality of life improved, we moved on to another need and did what needed to be done."

— Sister Ann Pitsenberger, OSF

"We have our lepers right here and throughout the world. But it is a different type of leprosy. If you do not like or avoid a person, that is the leper that you need to meet and embrace."

— Sister Dolorine Czok, OSF

"My father told me the story that when he was 19 years old (1926), he had a ruptured appendix. At that time, most people died with this diagnosis because there were no antibiotics. He was a patient in the hospital for nine weeks and taken care of by Sister Januarina and Sister Adelinda, whom he never forgot. Across the hall from him was a ward with coal miners recovering from various injuries. If they got too rowdy, the Sisters would tell them to be quiet because there was a sick boy across the hall. The Sisters provided almost private duty care for him — even oiled a squeaky door in the middle of the night to provide him comfort from the noise."✠

— Sister Maureen O'Connor, OSF

A healing presence that reaches the world: The global impact of Hospital Sisters Mission Outreach

From its Springfield warehouse, Hospital Sisters Mission Outreach (HSMO) continues to change the face of global health care — one shipment, one volunteer, and one act of generosity at a time. Founded by the Hospital Sisters of St. Francis in 2002, the organization has become an internationally recognized leader in medical supply and equipment recovery, delivering hope and healing to low-resource communities across the world.

In 2024 alone, Mission Outreach completed 112 shipments — including 17 shipping containers and 95 hand-carry deliveries — reaching 59 international partners in 34 countries. The total value of medical equipment and supplies distributed was an astounding $4.96 million, all coordinated by a small but mighty team in Springfield. Those shipments supported health systems serving more than 28 million people worldwide.

Behind these numbers are stories of transformation: hospitals equipped, surgeries made possible, and lives saved — all thanks to Mission Outreach's network of donors, volunteers, and partners. The mission is clear and powerful: to be Christ's healing presence to those most in need.

In 2024, the organization celebrated a remarkable achievement — serving its 100th country, with a shipment to Burundi's Habwawihe Medical Polyclinic. That delivery of 8,000 pounds of medical items — including incubators, birthing beds, and warmers — helps combat infant and maternal mortality rates that remain among the highest in the world.

In Moshi, Tanzania, Mission Outreach equipped St. Joseph Hospital with incubators, hospital beds, and pediatric oxygen masks — vital tools that hospital CEO Dr. Sister Hellen Kyilyosudu says will “make all the difference for our children.”

In war-torn Ukraine, Mission Outreach provided 10 containers and 300 surgical kits to help field hospitals continue care amid destruction. One priest in Lviv summed it up best: “We have been looking and looking for help for our doctors — and now here you are at our table!”

Mission Outreach's work also extends to disaster recovery, maternal and infant health, and biomedical engineering education. Following Hurricane Beryl's devastation in Jamaica, the team mobilized its fastest-ever shipment — assembling a 40-foot container of cots, medical supplies, and emergency items in less than two weeks.

In Peru, a collaboration with Bon Secours Mercy Health provided 2,000 water purifiers to families displaced by flooding, helping prevent disease and restore health. Through the new Clean Birth Kit initiative, Mission Outreach is addressing preventable maternal deaths, with a goal of shipping 3,000 kits in year one and 5,000 kits by year two.

The heart of Mission Outreach beats strongest in its volunteers. In 2024, more than hundreds of volunteers contributed 9,800 hours, processing 808 pallets of donations and preparing them for shipment. Their commitment equals an estimated $331,563 in donated volunteer time. Many also give financially — truly embodying “a life to be lived, not a work to be done.”

The organization also partners with Illinois College and TRIMEDX Foundation to train future biomedical engineers and ensure donated equipment is safe, sustainable, and functional. These partnerships empower students and professionals alike to serve with excellence and compassion.

As the only U.S. health system with a dedicated global health affiliate, Hospital Sisters Health System continues to model what faith-based health care can achieve on a global scale. Every container shipped, every surgical kit delivered, every prayer whispered over a pallet represents the continuation of a Franciscan legacy rooted in compassion, justice, and human dignity.

In the words of Executive Director Erica Smith, “Mission Outreach answers the call of a world in need — faithfully, sustainably, and together.”

apparent that throughout the U.S., it would be challenging for religious communities of men and women to keep up with the demands of governance and management because of the government regulations.

Beginning with the formation of Health Systems in the 1970s, the role of the laity (non-vowed religious men and women) in administration and governance took on a new dimension. This was influenced somewhat by a decline in religious vocations but more so by the growth and expansion of institutions requiring leadership. With these changes, Sisters realized that the laity would need to be prepared for the new roles they were already assuming. This was also the time that the Hospital Sisters of St. Francis learned how other Catholic religious communities were managing their hospitals and this led to the founding of Hospital Sisters Health System (HSHS) on Dec. 26, 1978 — an organization to oversee the management of the hospitals that were sponsored by the Sisters. In 2025, HSHS is a multi-institutional health care system in 12 communities in Illinois and Wisconsin with 13 hospitals, health centers, clinics, physician partners, and colleagues.

Since 1978, mindful of a decreasing number of Sisters who were present in the hospitals, programs regarding mission and values were shared with hospital colleagues, physicians, and volunteers. In 2015, the Hospital Sisters of St. Francis became the Legacy Sponsor of Hospital Sisters Ministries which is the public juridic sponsor of HSHS and its related organizations.

Brian C. Blasco is Director of Communications and Archivist for the Hospital Sisters of St. Francis.

HSHS employees reflect on ca-

Sister Helen Marie Plummer, OSF, is on the right, at St. John's Hospital.

"Sister Ritamary Brown hired me on a worker's permit at age 15. I always enjoyed working with her and interacted with her in my other roles later in life. Who would have thought that a career which began at 15 would end at age 65. I truly valued my time with the HSHS system. It offered opportunities for education and growth. I had many jobs as I grew, which all led me to grow both in my job and spiritually.

"One of my favorite memories was when I did sonography. Sometimes there were surprises. I found a pregnancy which was not expected. I gently brought the conversation and learned the woman had fertility issues. I turned the screen to show her the baby. There were many tears. The best part was Valentine's Day. She put the picture in a card for her husband. It was just the best!

— Joanne Van Leer, HSHS St. John's Hospital (Springfield) and St. Francis Hospital (Litchfield)

"Beyond my years as an employee, my most cherished memories come from being a patient here at St. Anthony's (Effingham) — especially the moments when I welcomed my children into the world within these walls. In those deeply personal times, I experienced firsthand the kindness, skill, and unwavering support of my colleagues, who became my caregivers, my encouragers, and my friends. One of our core values at HSHS is joy, and I have truly felt it in both my professional and personal journey here. Joy in the work we do, joy in the lives we touch, and joy in the love and dedication that fills this hospital every day."

— Angela Kelly, HSHS St. Anthony's Memorial Hospital Surgical Services and Administration

"I was born at St. Elizabeth's (Belleville) in 1967. The unit secretaries took the newborn pictures. Teresa Gauch took my baby picture. Then in 1995, I had my son at St. Elizabeth's and she was the one that took my son's picture also!

"I have been working at St. Elizabeth's for 38 years. While in nursing school, I got a job as a nursing assistant on what was the rehab unit. When I graduated nursing school in 1989, I was hired for med surg as they required experience before being hired on OB. I did nine months on med surg and was then hired on OB and have been here ever since. I love my work family even though faces have changed a lot over the years. I plan to stay until retirement." ♦
